PUSHING PAPER

Contemporary drawing from 1970 to now at The Cooper Gallery

For the first time, the British Museum has co-curated an exhibition with partner museums from around the UK to display and tour contemporary artworks from its Prints and Drawings collection.

Pushing paper: contemporary drawing from 1970 to now illustrates how artists experiment with the power of paper to express their ideas, pushing the medium in new directions. It highlights the breadth and quality of the Museum's collection of modern art, as well as its global scope.

The exhibition of 56 works showcases the astonishing diversity of contemporary drawing over the last fifty years, with graphic work by artists such as David Hockney, Rachel Whiteread, Sol LeWitt, Anish Kapoor, Tracey Emin and Grayson Perry, as well as exciting works by emerging artists like Hamid Sulaiman and Rachel Duckhouse. Many of these pieces will be on public display for the first time, including work by Gwen Hardie, Jonathan Callan and Jan Vanriet.

Until Saturday, 5th February – free.

 Exhibition

NEVER REACHING THE HORIZON

Harry Ousey's Abstracted Landscapes at The Cooper Gallery

Harry Ousey (1915–1985), a prolific post-war modernist artist, lived a life devoted to capturing abstract landscapes in his gestural style.

A bohemian drifter, Ousey eluded broad recognition, although many figures in the art world recognised his significance. Later exposure of his art by his niece, Sue Astles, has elevated his body of work, with pieces held in prestigious collections across the country.

Explore the life and works of Ousey as he roamed the landscapes of Cornwall, Derbyshire, Italy and France, where Ousey's story came to an end with his ashes scattered at the foot of Mont Sainte-Victoire in 1985.

Until Saturday, 8 January. Free, check gallery opening times before visiting www.cooper-gallery.com
